WORKSHOPS OVERVIEW

SPEED NETWORKING

Throughout the day there will be three sessions in which participants should partner with different attendees at the conference and answer these questions:

- Session I: Have you attended a Jump$start conference in the past? If yes, what have you found to make the biggest impact on the students/adults you are associated with? If no, what do you hope to learn at this conference that you will be able to incorporate into your work with students/adults?
- Session II: What do you see as your biggest challenge in teaching financial literacy and how can this Jump$start conference help meet that challenge?
- Session III: How will what you learned today make a difference in the lives of your students or adults with whom you work?

Five minutes will be allotted for each question, at which time one person will discuss their view while notes are taken by the other individual; then switch.

KEYNOTE: LESLIE JONES STRENGTHENING YOUTH FINANCIAL CAPABILITY

Adults who have high levels of financial capability have control of their finances, but how do children become adults with high levels of financial well-being? During this session, participants will learn teaching techniques and strategies to help build youth financial capability. We will spotlight CFPB's Building Blocks research and teaching pedagogy, a framework designed to help teachers select learning and teaching strategies for the classroom. Leslie Jones, Youth Financial Education Analyst, Consumer Financial Protection Bureau

FINANCIAL EDUCATION FROM THE AICPA

Personal finance education should start as soon as possible and keep going through retirement. To help bolster those lessons at early stages in life, the American Institute of CPAs (AICPA) provides free resources for both students and teachers. Their robust website includes lessons and games aimed at middle through high school students, including a new online game, Yesterday's Tomorrow, specifically geared toward the college age group, to get them thinking about how the decisions they make today will impact their future.

FINAL WORKSHOP: DAVID RAMSEY PRESENTATION

A David Ramsey trained professional will be going over the "7 Baby Steps" Ramsey uses to guide people out of debt and into wealth building. This will include an explanation of the "Debt Snow ball," an overview of credit card history, and the difference between using cash versus a card.
